Chapter 12.5: A Gift for the Mortal Realm (Continued)

The second clones of the Divine Triad had fulfilled their sacred mission on Earth. They had granted the Water of Eternal Life to the families and allies of the Divine Triad, ensuring their immortality and awakening the latent powers within them. The unawakened were now awakened, and the awakened had ascended to S-Rank status, regardless of their previous rank. Their bodies were now strengthened, their spirits empowered, and their lives extended for eons to come. The Earth had become a place of peace and power, safeguarded by these immortals and new S-Rank hunters.

But the second clones were not done with their mission. While they had completed their most immediate task, they understood that their presence on Earth was needed for much more than just immortality. They had become earthly warriors, not just as protectors of their families, but as vigilant hunters—ready to defend the Earth from any remaining threats in the multiverse and to continue their legacy as warriors.

The Ongoing Duty of the Second Clones

The second clone of Sung Jin-Woo and the second clone of Sung Su-Ho remained on Earth, now adopting the roles of hunters in the mortal realm, working to protect and guide the world’s forces. They did not reveal their true identities to anyone except for their closest family members and allies. However, their immense power and otherworldly aura did not go unnoticed by those around them.

Sung Jin-Woo’s second clone, taking on the guise of an experienced and powerful S-Rank Hunter, continued his work as a protector of Earth. His skills in combat were unmatched, and his ability to lead other hunters to victory became legendary. His family and allies were proud of his achievements, unaware that the man who stood before them was, in fact, a clone of the Absolute Humanoid Being. He fought alongside the world's strongest hunters, but his true purpose remained hidden: to ensure the safety of the Divine Triad’s multiverse empire, and to aid in the protection of the Earth and its newfound champions.

The second clone of Sung Su-Ho, now also an S-Rank Hunter, took on the role of mentor and warrior, using his dragonic powers and wisdom to guide the next generation of warriors. His wife, Lee Hye-Seo, and children, Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin, continued to thrive as their powers grew, but Sung Su-Ho’s clone remained the guiding hand in their development. He was a protector, not just of his family but of the entire world, ensuring that the Dragon Monarch's bloodline would remain a source of strength and stability for generations to come.

The Legacy of the Divine Triad’s Clones

The second clones were now part of Earth’s new golden age. Their roles as hunters allowed them to move freely across the world, tackling the remaining threats that occasionally arose from both within and beyond the realms. They fought in dangerous battles alongside other S-Rank hunters, but they also took on the responsibility of training the next wave of warriors who would rise to protect Earth in the future.

The Apostles of God, Shadow Lords, and Fiery Dragon Lords had secured the multiverse, but the Earth, now filled with immortal, awakened beings, had its own needs. The second clones worked in tandem with the Earth's newly empowered hunters, their strength and influence expanding with each battle they fought.

They continued to mentor and guide the S-Rank Hunters on Earth, teaching them not only how to hone their abilities but also how to live with purpose. The clones knew that immortality could be a burden for some, but with the guidance of their hands, Earth's heroes would learn to embrace their newfound power and live meaningful lives.

The Water of Eternal Life had granted them immortality, but it was the teaching of the second clones that would ensure the new generation of hunters understood the true meaning of their strength—protection, unity, and sacrifice.

The New World

In this new world, the Earth had become an integral part of the multiverse. With the Divine Triad's influence, the planet flourished. The new S-Rank hunters formed a strong alliance with the Divine Triad's forces—the Apostles of God, Heavenly Soldiers, Shadow Lords, and Fiery Dragon Lords. Together, they maintained peace across countless realms, ensuring that no dark force could breach the boundaries of their worlds.

The second clones stood as leaders, guides, and protectors on Earth. Though their power was only a fraction of their originals, their wisdom, control, and agility were unparalleled. As time passed, they became legendary figures—both in the hearts of their families and in the stories of Earth's greatest warriors.

The second clones were not just shadows of the Divine Triad. They were unique, immortal protectors in their own right, continuing to uphold the values and strength of the Absolute Beings, while nurturing the future of humanity.

This chapter marks the continuation of the second clones' journey on Earth. Their task is far from over, and they will continue to guide, protect, and fight alongside the new generation of heroes. They have become the foundations of Earth's protection, ensuring that the planet remains in harmony with the Divine Triad's eternal reign.